Senators Hunton of Virginia and Kyle of South Dakota have admitted the truth of the statement that they had been approached and offered money for their votes against the tariff bill, though both refused to name the man who made the offer.

THE quickest way for the silver party in the United States to bring England to terms on the question o bimetallism is to give her millionsires a big slice of silver mining stocks When his self interest is at stake John Bull will fall in line on any propo-*ition

THE attempted bribery of senators to vote against the Wilson bill will have the effect to speedily pass it. Every democrat who votes against it will be tainted with the suspicion of doing it for revenue only. It is a democratic measure and should receive a united democratic support.

AFTER two weeks recess the U. S. supreme court reassembled Monday, It is probable, however, that another recess will be taken until next Morday, and from then to October, owing to the large number of cases under consideration and upon which the members of the tribunal have yet to write opinions.

THE day has passed in Arizona when citizens can slander their fellow men with impunity. In the good old days ten years ago the pistol and riffzertled disputes between men, but ten years has worked a great change in the method of dealing with such matters. It is not necessary now to wreak one's vengeance on the heads of assassins and defamers. The law is ample to deal with them.

THE PROSPECTOR is in receipt of a letter from Washington, in which the writer pays Francis J. Heney and Secretary Bruce the high compliment of being closer to the administration than ony two men in Arizona. Their indefatigable energy in favor of statehood and the funding of our territorial icdebtedness will redound to our benefit in the near future, Mr. Heney never lets go of anything he starts out to accomplish.

SENATOR Wolcott uttered words of wisdom in an interview with the London Financial News, He said: "If you should ever want some of us from here to attend a conference in London to talk business, don't propose to shut us up there in a room fall of gold owners or civil servants, with fat, appreciating official salaries. You did not empanel a jury of dukes to decide whether your corn laws should be repeated; then why should you collect a lot of bankers to decide whether or no gold should be deprived of its present monopoly value by the restoration of the joint currency of the world?"

THE center of population of the United States is given by the census of 1890 as being at Greensburg, 20 miles east of Columbus, Indiana, In ten years, since the census of 1880, it has moved westward but 48 miles, and northward about nine miles. During the century ending 1890 the center of population has moved westward 505 miles from a point on the eastern coast of Maryland. If any person will take a map and study it, it will be found that this rate, if kept up, will land the center of population near the Mississippi river in another century, and it would take 400 years at the same ratio of increase to have night is a much talked of event that the center of population reach the Game to the Last. The pluck for which English people ned is an admirable quality. It has carried them through a good many tough matches at home and abroad. A sketch of the late Lord Drayton shows us an accusing exhibition of this ru-onal characteristic.

The author of the sketch was accompanying the earl, then eighty-five years of age, down the stairs to see him sal into his cab. On descending the stairs they were met by a cheery old gentleman, little of stature, Mr. John Levien, who was slowly ascending, hat in hand, mopping the dew off his bald head with his pocket handkerchief. The writer, knowing that both his friends, strangers to each other, were friends, strangers to each other, were proud of their ages, said to them as they met on the stairs: "Let me introduce a gentleman of eighty-five to a gentleman of eighty-five," "Eighty-twa sir," echoed the carl, slightly filting its hat to Mr. Levien. "I'll run you round the square for a fiver." Some days afterward Mr. Levien called on days afterward Mr. Levien called on the writer sgain, and remarked slowly and with much solemnity: "I've been thinking a great deal about that chal-lenge.
